A 1993 Buick caught fire and was destroyed in North Wilkesboro Monday morning.

North Wilkesboro Fire Chief Niki Hamby said the Buick's motor apparently was still hot when it was parked on leaves in the North Wilkesboro Elk's Club parking lot along Reynolds Road.

Hamby said the fire possibly started from contact between leaves and a hot catalytic converter.

He said the owner, who lives in an apartment on Reynolds Road, parked he car. The owner's name wasn't available.

The fire was fully developed when Hamby and other firefighters arrived after the North Wilkesboro Fire Department was dispatched at 10:39 a.m. Monday. There were no injuries.
